To me, the DVIS shelter means support. My family away from family.
- DVIS Client
We will have a safer community by fostering social change, ending domestic and sexual violence, healing survivors, and saving lives.

"DVIS is a safe haven for people to get their life back on track."

- DVIS Client
As the Board President for DVIS, I was proud to see the agency participate in multiple partnerships throughout the year that educated staff members, increased opportunities for self-care and gave survivors the opportunity to be heard. The agency started off 2019 by partnering with the Oklahoma Coalition Against Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault (OCADVSA) to bring Vanessa Timmons to Tulsa for a training on the intersection of race and sexual violence. Timmons gave DVIS’ staff a fantastic overview of the additional barriers people of color experience when seeking services.

DVIS was also able to hire Katelyn Jurney to serve as the agency’s Deaf RISE Project Coordinator. Through her, they were able to create a partnership with TSHA – a non-profit serving Deaf and hard of hearing people. This allowed the agency to offer both video and in-person interpreters at the shelter and at counseling appointments. DVIS employees were also given the opportunity to take free American Sign Language classes, enabling them to learn about Deaf culture and communicate in basic sign language.

DVIS received a grant from the Hardesty Family Foundation allowing them to offer weekly trauma-informed yoga at the shelter and their counseling offices. This allowed both employees and clients a time away from their daily activities to practice mindfulness and self-care. An additional opportunity that became available was a partnership with Trader Joe’s in Tulsa. Each Thursday, DVIS employees pick up the leftover flowers from the week before. These flowers are then distributed throughout Safe Housing and our counseling offices to brighten the spaces.

Finally, DVIS partnered with Tulsa Artist Fellows (TAF) on a series of workshops for survivors. In these workshops, survivors were able to create monologues sharing their personal stories. These monologues were then performed publically by local actors at a special event hosted at the Gilcrease Museum. There wasn’t a dry eye in the room. The survivor’s stories were very powerful and I think each person left feeling a renewed understanding of the importance of the support DVIS provides to survivors.

We look forward to your continued backing of DVIS, either monetarily, through volunteering or by sharing about the services they provide to survivors in our community. Please know your support is saving lives.

Mari Ramsey
DVIS Board President

For me, this place (DVIS Shelter) is very very good. It is quiet...people who work here, the respect you are giving to us is powerful.

– DVIS Client
I want to thank you for your ongoing support of Domestic Violence Intervention Services (DVIS) and all of our programs helping survivors of domestic and sexual violence in Tulsa and Creek counties. Because of you, we have been able to provide help to thousands of survivors and their families.

In 2019 the agency answered 18,323 calls to the information and crisis line, offered advocacy to 9,070 people seeking court advocacy services, provided counseling to 2,350 survivors of domestic and sexual violence, provided safe housing for 482 survivors and their children at the emergency shelter for a total of 30,218 bed nights of shelter, and provided education and outreach to 12,845 adults and teens in the community.

In this 2019 annual report we have chosen to highlight our safe housing program, which includes the emergency shelter and transitional housing apartments. We are proud to offer these facilities as a means of providing safety to survivors and their families. As you look through the remainder of this annual report you will see many accomplishments from our agency. Please know these were made possible by your generosity.

DVIS Emergency Shelter

DVIS’ current Emergency Shelter opened in the spring of 2015. The shelter originally included 80 beds, but has increased the capacity to 91+ beds to meet the rising demand in Tulsa and Creek Counties.

DVIS’ shelter is the only inclusive shelter in Oklahoma with the ability to house male survivors, as well as those with varying physical capabilities and household pets. Survivors are provided three meals per day plus snacks, childcare and an advocate to help them create goals, seek additional services such as counseling, and access additional local resources.

EMERGENCY SHELTER FACTS

• 99% of clients surveyed by the DVIS Shelter found shelter staff to be caring and supportive.

• 97% of clients surveyed by the DVIS Shelter indicated they felt their time in the shelter had been helpful.

• 97% of clients surveyed by the DVIS Shelter feel more confident they will achieve the goals they set for themselves.

• 96% of clients surveyed by the DVIS Shelter now know more ways to plan for the safety of their child(ren).

• 97% of clients surveyed by the DVIS Shelter feel more hopeful about their future.

• 96% of clients surveyed by the DVIS Shelter feel it is well-maintained.

“I am truly grateful to have stayed here. You are helping me change my life completely. I’m moving forward.”

Transitional Housing

DVIS’ Transitional Housing Facility includes 20 apartments with one, two or three bedrooms. Residents must apply and be approved to move in and are typically working towards self-sufficiency in some way.

Residents may live in their apartment for up to two years and have access to a business center, food pantry and an advocate to help them as they work to go back to school or develop job skills. The program residents are also encouraged to pay rent, which is then put into a savings account that the family can access at any point during their stay.

TRANSITIONAL HOUSING FACTS

- 100% of the clients surveyed by DVIS Transitional Housing believe the complex is safe, secure and well-maintained.
- 100% of the clients surveyed by DVIS Transitional Housing believe they are more independent accomplishing daily tasks.
- 100% of the clients surveyed by DVIS Transitional Housing believe they are better able to address problems with child(ren) living with them.
- 100% of the clients surveyed by DVIS Transitional Housing feel more confident in their decision making.
- 100% of the clients surveyed by DVIS Transitional Housing feel they better understand the cycle of violence and patterns of abuse.
- 100% of clients surveyed by DVIS Transitional Housing feel they are better able to manage their daily self-care.

“Thank you for everything. I was so lost and needed to gain my footing.”

What did I do…
I remember how my head felt
hot against the concrete driveway
I remember the sirens
I still hear them, like an echo trapped inside my head
to make you treat me so cheaply?

What did I do
July 10th, a Sunday afternoon, a hot July Sunday afternoon
The baby was asleep in his room
We were outside, the three boys, our daughter and I Making worlds out of chalk in the driveway below our front porch
to make you so angry?

What did I do
We were having fun, we were enjoying the day
The boys busy with trucks and planes, their favorite to draw
Our daughter readying her pretty butterflies to take flight
We just needed more chalk
to make you beat me down?

I slipped inside to get more chalk
In that drawer below the TV set
It was Grand Theft Auto you were playing
In your black t-shirt and jeans, you sat on the couch
And told me to move out of the way.
I said nothing, just grabbed the chalk and walked away
Pushing the screen door open
I came down the stairs with our needed supplies
The screen door swung back behind me
Clapping enough to wake the baby
though I didn’t know it had.
Until I heard you, now yelling on the front porch.
And I rushed up the steps
Telling you I’d take care of it
“You’ve done enough”
Is all you said.

All the way down the front porch steps
You pushed me down
Pushed me down onto the ground
And left me dazed on the concrete,
hot from the summer sun.

I wanted to scream and fight you
But I didn’t dare meet your eyes.
Praying you’d see what you had done—
couldn’t you see I was broken up inside.
My eyes glistening with tears
A lump lodged uneasily in my throat
My tiny body exhausted
I knew the worst was near,
this could not be anymore.

The house in Claremore Thirteen years it was full of rooms for us all you wore me down, but still wanted more and a big front porch to welcome all you ripped away my dignity
that house in Claremore was hell for me.

You killed my spirit.
You trampled over my very life
and stole my foundation
I just don’t know why.

When I remember how my head felt
hot against the concrete driveway
When I remember the sirens
hearing them as they echo
I disappear to that place I conjured all those years.

I disappear to a world without hurt
It often takes place in the bathroom
Because you never hurt me there.
There, I have friends
They put their arms around me
And I smile.

They take me to a place where the angels sing lullabies
And I’m sad I can never stay,
though they promise
I’ll be with them there one day.

My friends give me hope that I can climb out of this pain.
My friends.
They are in my imagination, I know that now.
Imaginary, they help me to survive
They rescue me and give me refuge
My friends saved my life.

I am those friends.
And I’m becoming a new person
Letting some people in, like my new friend Andrea.
My go-to person,
She gives me a sense of peace and protection.

And I am my friend.
Learning to love myself
all over again.
I am drawing myself off that hot concrete driveway,
a beautiful yellow butterfly, I fly, fly away.
